

Abstract of the Disclosure

A computer system for facilitating an operation of a pointing device and reducing power consumption thereof. The computer system is implemented with a display screen, a pointing
5 device, and a position detecting unit. The pointing device includes a position indicating button thereon. The pointing device emits a beam of light in response to a push of the position indicating button. The position detecting unit 10 detects a position at which the beam reaches on the display screen.